

It was the summer of 2009 that my wife and I met Greg DeMille and Marty Shurtleff . We had talked to most of the other builders on and off the mountain. We were taken on a tour of many cabins that were resale's and we had read just about everything you could about cabins. We had also made at least 3 other tries of building on the mountain during the past fifteen years but always something was not quite right. This time there was a change and that was finding Greg. We met with him and soon found the he was that "can do" guy. We looked at his plans and made changes right up to the last days before the basement was poured. His suggestions were always right on. The cabin (home) got a late start because of banking and because we took a good three weeks to think the matter over. We found all the banks we had ever worked with had stopped making construction loans. This made, doing this job even more complex. Well it was December before the money was there. Greg with his (can do attitude) still said, "Everything would be up and in before summer". It took a little longer to put the driveway in because it was way too wet, but we got into our cabin and enjoyed the 2010 summer. Greg has jumped on any problems but really there have been few. Our neighbors are shocked to see this our home completed at the beginning of the summer when the last time they were up there were just trees on a vacant lot. One neighbor who was often on the mountain said it was a great year watching the building of our cabin in the terrible weather and having the road cleared all winter. We want to thank Greg and Marty and the different crews who put together a dream for my wife and myself. Our mountain home is beyond what we envisioned and these guys are what made it happen. Their caring touches show all over this home. Thank You Greg DeMille Construction
