

I didn't know Greg DeMille from Adam when I first met him, but he (and a few others) had come recommended by one of the local supply places. He met me on the land my wife and I bought, and I gave him a copy of a set of plans we had, and I asked him some questions about how he worked.

Although we knew we wanted to build a cabin there, we were concerned about selecting a contractor. We didn't have any personal experience with any from the area, but we had several friends who did. We heard "horror" stories about the reliability and craftsmanship of some of the area contractors and subcontractors, and as a result, we were a bit worried.

From the very first minute, Greg had a "can do" attitude about our project. (This was in contrast to a couple of lukewarm responses from other contractors I met on site.) Greg turned out to be the only one who provided a list of references, and acted like he wanted the project. We followed up on the references and decided to hire him.

Even then, I was still a bit worried and hoped for the best. We soon learned we had made the right choice. Greg and his crew wasted no time in getting started. In what seemed like the blink of an eye, the land was cleared and the basement was poured. Soon, the framing was completed, the roof was on, and we were on our way.

I could probably write a few pages, but I'll just say this: Greg did what we wanted him to do, when we wanted him to do it, and for the price he said he would do it at. Inevitably, there WERE some changes and add-ons, but he did not take those opportunities to gouge us, rather he was fair, and his work was great. Just as important, he pointed out a couple of design flaws that we hadn't caught, and rather than just blindly go ahead and do the work and leave us to deal with the future consequences, he discussed them with us, and gave us options on better ways to go.

As a result, we now have a cabin we're very proud of. It's been several months since completion, and we love it! I wouldn't hesitate to recommend Greg and his crew.
